

NEW & RECENT

THE OLD ENGLISH IN EARLY MODERN IRELAND

The Palesmen and the Nine Years' War, 1594-1603

RUTH A. CANNING

Although Catholic, and feeling supplanted by the more recent New English colonisers, the Old English remained loyal to the crown despite worries that they would not. This new book examines the divided loyalties of these descendants of Ireland's Anglo-Norman conquerors during the wars against the Irish confederate rebels.

CATHOLIC SURVIVAL IN PROTESTANT IRELAND, 1660-1711

Colonel John Browne, Landownership and the Articles of Limerick

EOIN KINSELLA

Drawing on the experiences of a leading Catholic landowner, John Browne, builder of Westport House, this book shows how Catholic landowners worked to secure their position and fit in with the new regime. Kinsella overturns established thinking that the Catholic elite were all expropriated and excluded from civil and political life as the Protestant Ascendancy was established.

HUGH DE LACY, FIRST EARL OF ULSTER

Rising and Falling in Angevin Ireland

DANIEL BROWN

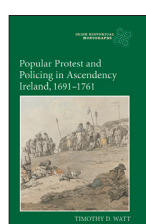

From the contested frontier zone of Anglo-Norman Ulster, through favour then disgrace with King John, to crusading against heretic Albigensians in southern France, to eventual restoration as Earl of Ulster, Hugh II de Lacy's life tells us a great deal about the tumultuousness of the period.

PERCEPTIONS OF FEMININITY IN EARLY IRISH SOCIETY

HELEN OXENHAM

Was femininity in early Irish society perceived as weak and sinful, innately inferior to masculinity? Was it seen as powerful and dangerous, a threat to the peace and tranquility of male society? Or was there a more nuanced view, an understanding that femininity, or femininities, could be presented in a variety of ways according to the pragmatic concerns of the writer? This book examines the sources surviving from fifth- to ninth-century Ireland, aiming to offer a fresh view of authorial perceptions of the period, and in particular to highlight the complexities of those perceptions.
