

Secret in a Message

Below is a letter from Lemony Snicket warning you of the whereabouts of Count Olaf. Circle the spelling errors and write out the correct or missing letters on the lines provided at the bottom of the page. When you have completed this grueling task, it will reveal one of the places that Count Olaf terrifies the Baudelaires.

Dear Reader:

If this letter has reached you, it must mean that you have read the woeful tales of the Baudelaires. Against your better judgment and my constant warnings, you have chosen to reed about the misery and horrors that have befallen Violet, Klaus, and Sunny Baudelaire. From the terrible news on the beach, to the deadly serpents, the hungry leeches, and the angry mob, you have sadly shared in their suffering. Now, they need your help. If you are up to this task, you can help find the Baudelaires to warn them that Court Olaf is on the prowl.

However, you must fand the clue yourself. When you have ubcovered the clue, be very careful not to say it out loud, for surely Count Olaf and his associates are close by, listening to ebery word you say. So, keep it to yourself, but be sure to find a way to relay the messuge to the Baudelaires without being caught.

I hope you, unlike the ill-fated Baudelaires, are lucky enough to survive this risky mission.

With al due respect,

Lemony Snicket

Lemony Snicket

C

Illustrations © Brett Helquist

REPRODUCIBLE CTI

