Mourning Animals
Rituals and Practices Surrounding Animal Death
Edited by Margo DeMello

We live more intimately with nonhuman animals than ever before in history. The change in the way we cohabitate with animals can be seen in the way we treat them when they die. There is an almost infinite variety of ways to help us cope with the loss of our nonhuman friends—from burial, cremation, and taxidermy; to wearing or displaying the remains (ashes, fur, or other parts) of our deceased animals in jewelry, tattoos, or other artwork; to counselors who specialize in helping people mourn pets; to classes for veterinarians; to tips to help the surviving animals who are grieving their animal friends; to pet psychics and memorial websites. But the reality is that these practices, and related beliefs about animal souls or animal afterlife, generally only extend, with very few exceptions, to certain kinds of animals—pets. Most animals, in most cultures, are not mourned, and the question of an animal afterlife is not contemplated at all. Mourning Animals investigates how we mourn animal deaths, which animals are grievable, and what the implications are for all animals.

MARGO DEMELLO is an adjunct professor in the anthrozoology master’s program at Canisius College and the program director for Human-Animal Studies at the Animals and Society Institute.

“Our relationships with animals are haunted by death. It lingers in the liminal space of the soul in grief—in painful recognition when a beloved cat, rabbit, parrot, or dog passes; in the confused stricken anonymity of worldwide extinctions; and in the palpable suffering behind factory walls. In its lyrical marriage of personal experience and scholarship, Mourning Animals brings together the beauty, love, and exquisite poignancy of what it means to live with animal kin.”

Twelve Twenty-Five
The Life and Times of a Steam Locomotive

Kevin P. Keefe

The against-all-odds story of a World War II–era steam locomotive and the determination of two generations of volunteers to keep it running comes alive in Twelve Twenty-Five: The Life and Times of a Steam Locomotive.

Pere Marquette 1225 was built in 1941 at the peak of steam locomotive development. The narrative traces the 1225’s regular freight service in Michigan, its unlikely salvation from the scrapyard for preservation at Michigan State University, and the subsequent work to bring it back to steam, first by a student club and later by a railroad museum. Milestones along the way include 1225’s retirement in 1951, its donation to MSU in 1957, its return to steam in 1988, a successful career hauling tens of thousands of excursion riders, and its starring role in the 2004 movie The Polar Express. The massive infrastructure that supported American steam locomotives in their heyday disappeared long ago, forcing 1225’s faithful to make their own spare parts, learn ancient railroad skills, and interpret the entire effort for the public. As such, the continuing career of 1225 is a triumph of historic preservation.

“Kevin Keefe has produced the definitive book on the restoration of Pere Marquette locomotive 1225. Melding the history and development of the steam locomotive and Lima’s Super Power designs gives a solid foundation to the historical relevance of Project 1225. Kevin’s intimate and important relationship to the early years of the project and his distinguished career as a journalist has yielded a brilliant and accurate account of the restoration of this wonderful steam locomotive.”

—RANDY G. PAQUETTE, Michigan State University Railroad Club

Mid-Michigan Modern
From Frank Lloyd Wright to Googie
Susan J. Bandes

From 1940 to 1970 mid-Michigan had an extensive and varied legacy of modernist architecture. While this book explores buildings by renowned architects such as Frank Lloyd Wright, Alden B. Dow, and the Keck brothers, the text—based on archival research and oral histories—focuses more heavily on regional architects whose work was strongly influenced by international modern styles. The reader will see a picture emerge in the portrayal of buildings of various typologies, from residences to sacred spaces. The automobile industry, state government, and Michigan State University served as the economic drivers when the mid-Michigan area expanded enormously in the growing optimism and increasing economic prosperity after World War II. Government, professional associations, and private industry sought an architectural style that spoke to forward-looking, progressive ideals. Smaller businesses picked a Prairie style that made people feel comfortable. Modernist houses reflected the increasingly informal American lifestyle rooted in the automobile culture. With a detailed narrative discussing more than 130 buildings and enriched by 150 illustrations, this text is a vibrant start at reclaiming the history of mid-Michigan modernist architecture.

“Bandes has compiled a richly illustrated compendium of modern architecture in the Lansing/East Lansing area—including designs never built, low-cost cooperatives, homes, a grocery store, and Lansing City Hall. By sharing the human stories behind the buildings, from architects and clients to church committees, she also provides a valuable illustration of the way modern design concepts and materials of the post–World War II era spread from national architects and early adopters to such mundane aspects of everyday life as Dawn Donuts.”
—SANDRA SAGESER CLARK, director, Michigan Historical Center

As She Was Discovering Tigony
Olympe Bhély-Quenum, translated by Tomi Adeaga

Dorcas Keurléonan-Moricet is a brilliant white geophysicist posted on assignment in Africa. She falls in love with a young African man, Ségué n’Di, and enters into an extramarital affair with him. In her professional work, she discovers deposits of minerals of inestimable worth. Reading the current age of globalization and neoliberalism as one in which the riches of Africa are again being cynically exploited by multinational companies—including her own—Keurléonan-Moricet’s views and her life gradually change. As the popular resistance against the dictatorial regime in power grows, she comes to play a key role in the unfolding political drama.

“In this complex narrative, one of Africa’s most inventive and original novelists explores critical social and ethical issues that have been made relevant by the expansion of global capital. By weaving themes of sexual love, social justice, and capitalist exploitation, Bhély-Quenum probes the question of who has a right to discover, share, control, and ultimately benefit from Africa’s wealth.”
—PHYLLIS TAOUA, associate professor of French, University of Arizona

OLYMPE BHÉLY-QUENUM has been a professor, international civil servant, journalist, anthropologist, sociologist and researcher, literary critic, and writer. His novels and short stories, originally written in French, have been translated into English, German, Slovene, Czech, and Greek.

Doomi Golo—The Hidden Notebooks
Boubacar Boris Diop, translated by Vera Wülfing-Leckie and El Hadj Moustapha Diop

The first novel to be translated from Wolof to English, Doomi Golo—The Hidden Notebooks is a masterful work that conveys the story of Ngirane Faye and his attempts to communicate with his grandson before he dies. With a narrative structure that beautifully imitates the movements of a musical piece, Diop relates Faye's trauma of losing his only son, Assane Tall, which is compounded by his grandson Badou’s migration to an unknown destination. While Faye feels certain that his grandson will return one day, he also is convinced that he will no longer be alive by then. Faye spends his days sitting under a mango tree in the courtyard of his home, reminiscing and observing his surroundings. He speaks to Badou through his seven notebooks, six of which are revealed to the reader, while the seventh, the “Book of Secrets,” is highly confidential and reserved for Badou’s eyes only. In the absence of letters from Badou, the notebooks form the only possible means of communication between the two, carrying within them tunes and repetitions that give this novel its unusual shape: loose and meandering on the one hand, coherent and tightly interwoven on the other.

Born in Dakar, Senegal, in 1946, BOUBACAR BORIS DIOP is widely regarded as one of the most important novelists and intellectuals in Africa.

*One of the best writers working in Africa today, Diop has taken the daring step of writing a novel in Wolof, his native tongue. An old man writes a series of notebooks to explain the cockeyed history of his country to his grandson, but the grandson has left Senegal and may never read the notebooks. The result is an innovative, exuberant narrative where Senegalese folktales bang up against postmodern uncertainties, altering the form of the European novel."

You as of Today My Homeland
Stories of War, Self, and Love
Tayseer al-Sboul, translated by Nesreen Akhtarkhavari

This volume comprises a translation of the first post-modernist historical Arabic novella, You as of Today, by the renowned Jordanian writer Tayseer al-Sboul, and his two short stories “Red Indian” and “The Rooster’s Cry.” “Red Indian” and “The Rooster’s Cry” complement You as of Today by providing, with striking transparency and precision, narratives that examine man’s journey to self-discovery through events that are culturally unique, transparent, and at times shocking. This volume is rich with tales of war, love, politics, censorship, and the search for self in a complex and conflicting Arab world at a critical time in its history. In a captivating style consistent with the nature of events narrated in the text, al-Sboul unveils the inner nature of social, political, and religious patterns of life in Arab society with an honesty and skill that renders You as of Today My Homeland a testimony of human experiences that transcend the boundaries of time and place.

“In brutal honesty, al-Sboul bares his soul and provides us with authentic narrative loaded with social, cultural, and political experiences, rich with emotions, Arab in focus, and human in dimension. Through this translation, the novel and stories prove that a well-documented and skillfully narrated work transcends the boundaries of language and place, and helps us discover our shared humanity.”

Contemporary African Cinema
Olivier Barlet

African and notably sub-Saharan African film’s relative eclipse on the international scene in the early twenty-first century does not transcend the growth within the African genre. This time period has seen African cinema forging a new relationship with the real and implementing new aesthetic strategies, as well as the emergence of a post-colonial popular cinema.

Drawing on more than 1,500 articles, reviews, and interviews written over the past fifteen years, Olivier Barlet identifies the critical questions brought about by the evolution of African cinema. In the process, he offers us a personal and passionate vision, making this book an indispensable sum of thought that challenges preconceived ideas and enriches an approach to cinema as a critical art.

OLIVIER BARLET is a member of the Syndicat Français de la Critique de Cinéma, a member of the African Federation of Film Critics, a delegate for Africa at the Cannes Festival Critics’ Week, and a film critic for Africultures.

“For a long while Olivier Barlet has been a sure-footed guide in the rugged terrain of African cinema. Now in a fast-moving sequence of vivid reports, he brings us close to an amazing array of films and situations across the continent in this century. Africa has broken out of its ‘exotic’ isolation. Its films, whose striking styles he sketches, participate in cultural and political debates that go beyond Africa. He makes us pay attention to what they say and, more important, what they show.”

Brazilian-African Diaspora in Ghana
The Tabom, Slavery, Dissonance of Memory, Identity, and Locating Home
Kwame Essien

Brazilian-African Diaspora in Ghana is a fresh approach, challenging both pre-existing and established notions of the African Diaspora by engaging new regions, conceptualizations, and articulations that move the field forward. This book examines the untold story of freed slaves from Brazil who thrived socially, culturally, and economically despite the challenges they encountered after they settled in Ghana. Kwame Essien goes beyond the one-dimensional approach that only focuses on British abolitionists’ funding of freed slaves’ resettlements in Africa. The new interpretation of reverse migrations examines the paradox of freedom in discussing how emancipated Brazilian-Africans came under threat from British colonial officials who introduced stringent land ordinances that deprived the freed Brazilian-Africans from owning land, particularly “Brazilian land.” Essien considers anew contention between the returnees and other entities that were simultaneously vying for control over social, political, commercial, and religious spaces in Accra and tackles the fluidity of memory and how it continues to shape Ghana’s history. The ongoing search for lost connections with the support of the Brazilian government—inspiring multiple generations of Tabom (offspring of the returnees) to travel across the Atlantic and back, especially in the last decade—illustiates the unending nature of the transatlantic diaspora journey and its impacts.

KWAME ESSIEN is a Derrick K. Gondwe fellow and an assistant professor of history and Africana studies at Lehigh University.
Decolonizing the Republic
Félix F. Germain

Decolonizing the Republic is a conscientious discussion of the African diaspora in Paris in the post–World War II period. This book is the first to examine the intersection of black activism and the migration of Caribbeans and Africans to Paris during this era and, as Patrick Manning notes in the foreword, successfully shows how “black Parisians—in their daily labors, weekend celebrations, and periodic protests—opened the way to ‘decolonizing the Republic,’ advancing the respect for their rights as citizens.” Contrasted to earlier works focusing on the black intellectual elite, Decolonizing the Republic maps the formation of a working-class black France. Readers will better comprehend how those peoples of African descent who settled in France and fought to improve their socioeconomic conditions changed the French perception of Caribbean and African identity, laying the foundation for contemporary black activists to deploy a new politics of social inclusion across the demographics of race, class, gender, and nationality. This book complicates conventional understandings of decolonization, and in doing so opens a new and much-needed chapter in the history of the black Atlantic.

FÉLIX F. GERMAIN is an assistant professor in the Department of Africana Studies at the University of Pittsburgh.

"With Decolonizing the Republic, Félix Germain offers the reader a meticulously researched historical meditation on immigration, labor politics, social organizing, and music in the continuing evolution of Black identities across the spectrums of color, class, and nationality in the postwar period in France. In parsing these intersecting phenomena along with the ideals of French Republicanism, Germain ably demonstrates the praxis of a twenty-first century French Pan-African consciousness."

Giving Life, Giving Death
Psychoanalysis, Anthropology, Philosophy
Lucien Scubla, translated by M. B. DeBevoise

Although women alone have the ability to bring children into the world, modern Western thought tends to discount this female prerogative. In Giving Life, Giving Death, Lucien Scubla argues that structural anthropology sees women as objects of exchange that facilitate alliance-building rather than as vectors of continuity between generations. Examining the work of Lévi-Strauss, Freud, and Girard, as well as ethnographic and clinical data, Giving Life, Giving Death seeks to explain why, in constructing their master theories, our greatest thinkers have consistently marginalized the cultural and biological fact of maternity. In the spirit of Freud’s Totem and Taboo, Scubla constructs an anthropology that posits a common source for family and religion. His wide-ranging study explores how rituals unite violence and the sacred and intertwine the giving of death and the giving of life.

“Giving Life, Giving Death delivers a challenge to both psychoanalysts and anthropologists. It makes something that neither group has wanted to see look like an obvious fact, namely that the desire and organization of human societies do not revolve around penisneid, the Oedipus complex (classically interpreted), or alliance, but instead around masculine envy of women’s power to give birth and relations of filiation as much as or more than alliance. Giving Life, Giving Death marks a turning point in the field.”

Conrad’s Shadow
Catastrophe, Mimesis, Theory
Nidesh Lawtoo

Conrad’s Shadow proposes a mimetic approach to the old romantic subject of the doppelgänger. Through a reading of Joseph Conrad’s novels, Nidesh Lawtoo examines the psychological, ethical, and anthropological implications of contagious affects that trouble the boundaries of individuation. Looking at Conrad’s fiction through the lens of mimesis sheds light on key themes of dueling, catastrophe, and ritual sacrifice. Mimesis, for Conrad, is dark and pathological: generative of split identities, hypnotic swoons, and violent symptoms. Yet in Conrad’s oeuvre mimesis is also luminous and therapeutic—because the author himself suffered from personal losses and psychic tensions, he could represent and diagnose such symptoms in his characters. Taken together, these symptoms reflect Conrad’s double life as seaman and writer. They also indicate that throughout his career he used his mimetic faculties to reflect on the logical and pathological consequences of being oneself—while simultaneously being possessed by someone other.

NIDESH LAWTOO is Visiting Scholar in the Humanities Center at Johns Hopkins University with a research fellowship granted by the Swiss National Science Foundation.
Internationalizing a School of Education
Integration and Infusion in Practice
John Schwille

Internationalizing a School of Education examines how Michigan State University has pursued internationalization and globalization through an integration-infusion approach to research, teaching, and outreach. The integration-infusion approach was introduced in MSU’s College of Education in the early 1980s as a replacement for the more disconnected comparative education program. This approach offers a vision where all faculty members and students are knowledgeable about education in all its international diversity, where their conceptions and aspirations are influenced by international research and experience, and where they reach out to other countries in collaborative efforts to do research, inform policy, and improve practice. Featuring profiles of faculty members and students who were leaders of this integration-infusion approach, this text provides a survey of the landscape of comparative education in the United States while examining channels of internationalization specific to MSU, highlighting the success of integration-infusion at an institutional level.

He is an honorary member of the International Association for the Evaluation of Educational Achievement (IEA) and an honorary fellow of the Comparative and International Education Society (CIES).
The Landscape of Rural Service Learning, and What It Teaches Us All

Edited by Randy Stoecker, Nicholas Holton, and Charles Ganzert

Up until now, the majority of literature about service learning has focused on urban areas, while comparatively little attention has been paid to activities in rural communities. The Landscape of Rural Service Learning, and What It Teaches Us All is designed to provide a comprehensive look at rural service learning. The practices that have developed in rural areas, partly because of the lack of nonprofits and other services found in urban settings, produce lessons and models that can help us all rethink the dominant forms of service learning defined by urban contexts. Where there are few formal organizations, people end up working more directly with one another; where there is a need for services in locations where they are unavailable, service learning becomes more than just an academic exercise or assignment. This volume includes theoretical frameworks that are informed by the rural, concrete stories that show how rural service learning has developed and is now practiced, practical strategies that apply across service learning contexts, and points to ponder as we all consider our next steps along the path of meaningful service learning.

CHARLES GANZERT is a professor in the Communication and Performance Studies Department at Northern Michigan University, where he teaches media law, audio production, documentary, and media management.

Sustainability defines the need for any society to live within the constraints of the land’s capacity to deliver all natural resources it consumes. To be sustainable, nature and its endowment need to be linked to human behavior, similar to the practices of indigenous peoples. The River of Life compares the general differences between Native Americans’ and the Western world’s view of resources and provides the nuts and bolts of a sustainability portfolio designed by indigenous peoples. It also introduces ideas on how to link nature and society to make sustainable choices, aiming to facilitate thinking about how to change destructive behaviors and to integrate indigenous culture into thinking and decision processes.

Sounding Thunder
The Stories of Francis Pegahmagabow
Brian D. McInnes

Francis Pegahmagabow (1889–1952), an Ojibwe of the Caribou clan, was born in Shawanaga First Nation, Ontario. Enlisting at the onset of the First World War, he served overseas as a scout and sniper and became Canada’s most decorated Indigenous soldier. After the war, Pegahmagabow settled in Wasauksing First Nation, Ontario, where he married and raised six children. He served his community as both Chief and Councillor and was a founding member of the Brotherhood of Canadian Indians, the first national Indigenous political organization. In 1949 and 1950, he was elected the Supreme Chief of the National Indian Government.

Francis Pegahmagabow’s stories describe many parts of his life and are characterized by classic Ojibwe narrative. They reveal aspects of Francis’s Anishinaabe life and worldview. Interceding chapters by Brian McInnes provide valuable cultural, spiritual, linguistic, and historical insights that give a greater context and application for Francis’s words and world. Presented in their original Ojibwe as well as in English translation, the stories also reveal a rich and evocative relationship to the lands and waters of Georgian Bay.

In Sounding Thunder, Brian McInnes provides a new perspective on Pegahmagabow and his experience through a unique synthesis of Ojibwe oral history, historical record, and Pegahmagabow family stories.

BRIAN D. McINNES is a professional educator and author dedicated to diversity education, youth engagement, and organizational leadership. He is also a member of the Wasauksing First Nation and a descendant of Francis Pegahmagabow.

Rethinking Rhetorical Theory, Criticism, and Pedagogy
The Living Art of Michael C. Leff
Edited by Antonio de Velasco, John Angus Campbell, and David Henry

What distinguishes the study of rhetoric from other pursuits in the liberal arts? From what realms of human existence and expression, of human history, does such study draw its defining character? What, in the end, should be the purposes of rhetorical inquiry? And amid so many competing accounts of discourse, power, and judgment in the contemporary world, how might scholars achieve these purposes through the attitudes and strategies that animate their work?

_Rethinking Rhetorical Theory, Criticism, and Pedagogy: The Living Art of Michael C. Leff_ offers answers to these questions by introducing the central insights of one of the most innovative and prolific rhetoricians of the twentieth century, Michael C. Leff. This volume charts Leff’s decades-long development as a scholar, revealing both the variety of topics and the approach that marked his oeuvre, as well as his long-standing critique of the disciplinary assumptions of classical, Hellenistic, renaissance, modern, and postmodern rhetoric.

_Rethinking Rhetorical Theory, Criticism, and Pedagogy_ includes a synoptic introduction to the evolution of Leff’s thought from his time as a graduate student in the late 1960s to his death in 2010, as well as specific commentary on twenty-four of his most illuminating essays and lectures.

John H. Burdakin and the Grand Trunk Western Railroad provides a look at the principles and personal values that guided John H. Burdakin through a long, successful career as a top manager at three railroads—the Pennsylvania, the Penn Central, and finally the Grand Trunk Western, where he was president of the regional carrier from 1974 to 1986. The book, written from interviews with Burdakin before his death in 2014, gives real-life examples of how Burdakin's management principles and personal qualities helped him solve labor-management problems, update railroad technology, protect worker safety, and improve employee morale while managing a four thousand–person workforce. It introduces colorful characters who were involved in American railroads, as well as the serious, life-threatening issues that confronted railroads in the last half of the twentieth century in America. This book will provide insights for managers of any business as well as for those seeking to balance a successful career and a rewarding home life.

Remarkable Rebirth
The Early History of the Armenians in Detroit
Ashod Rhaffi Aprahamian

The only known study of its kind, Remarkable Rebirth, through historical documentation and interviews with prominent Armenians, tells the story of the growth of the Armenian community in Detroit. Ashod Rhaffi Aprahamian’s contribution to the study of the Armenian diaspora begins with the arrival of an Armenian in the Jamestown Colony circa 1618 and continues to the early history and growth of the Armenian community in Detroit.

“Remarkable Rebirth covers the entire gamut of Armenian community life in Detroit: the first cultural shock of the immigrant population; its ambivalence over continuing life in the new world or returning to the old country; the burgeoning life around social and political clubs; involvement in commercial activities; development of religious, charitable, and educational institutions; etc., all within the context of the broader Armenian experience throughout the United States and in comparison with other ethnic groups.” —EDMOND Y. Applewood
The Charles Stewart Mott Estate—One Hundred Years of Stories, 1916–2016
Susan J. Newhof

Charles Stewart Mott was one of the largest single holders of General Motors stock when he and his first wife, Ethel Culbert Harding Mott, purchased sixty-four acres at the edge of downtown Flint, Michigan, and built a stately gentleman’s farm. They called their spread Applewood, after an orchard on the north lawn, and laid the cornerstone in 1916. The Motts loved dogs, sports, card games, and their homegrown food. They hosted elegant dinner parties, fundraising events, business meetings, and gatherings of schoolkids. Six Mott children grew up at Applewood, alongside several children of employees who lived on the grounds. Early automotive giants visited frequently, as did entertainers, political figures, and the Motts’ large circle of family and friends. This book tells the stories of Applewood’s first one hundred years, from celebrations to tragedies. It profiles the four women who loved and married C. S. Mott and recalls the days when most of the family’s food came from animals and crops raised on the estate. It recalls talented cooks, nannies, and a genial Scottish gardener, and showcases treasured antiques and artwork that remain at Applewood, which is now a part of the Ruth Mott Foundation. Drawing from the Ruth Mott Foundation archives, author Susan J. Newhof weaves stories with passages from personal letters, interviews with family members and staff, and C. S. Mott’s detailed diary, which he dictated nearly every day for forty-one years. More than 250 photos dating from the late 1800s to today, including candid family snapshots, illustrate the stories and provide an intimate look at the private life of a very public family and the place they called home.

SUSAN J. NEWHOF works as a writer and communication consultant for foundations and nonprofit organizations.

“Applewood has been carefully preserved, fulfilling Ruth Mott’s wish that it be a memorial to her cherished husband and a resource for the community. Come explore the landscaped grounds and barns, take part in creative hands-on programs, gaze up into the canopy of a giant old sugar maple, and learn how to care for the environment. Sample the heirloom apples from the namesake orchard, and discover their unique flavors, just as the Motts did.”

Conversations in Food Studies
Edited by Colin R. Anderson, Jennifer Brady, and Charles Z. Levkoe

Few things are as important as the food we eat. Conversations in Food Studies demonstrates the value of interdisciplinary research through the cross-pollination of disciplinary, epistemological, and methodological perspectives. Widely diverse essays, ranging from the meaning of milk, to the bring-your-own wine movement, to urban household waste, are the product of collaborating teams of interdisciplinary authors. Readers are invited to engage and reflect on the theories and practices underlying some of the most important issues facing the emerging field of food studies today.

Conversations in Food Studies brings to the table thirteen original contributions organized around the themes of representation, governance, disciplinary boundaries, and, finally, learning through food.

This collection offers an important and groundbreaking approach to food studies as it examines and reworks the boundaries that have traditionally structured the academy and that underlie much of food studies literature.

COLIN R. ANDERSON is a researcher at the Centre for Agroecology, Water and Resilience at Coventry University in the United Kingdom.

JENNIFER BRADY is a PhD candidate at the School of Kinesiology and Health Studies, Queen’s University.

CHARLES Z. LEVKOE is a postdoctoral fellow, Wilfrid Laurier University; adjunct research professor, Carleton University; research associate, Centre for Sustainable Food Systems.
Fault Lines
Life and Landscape in Saskatchewan’s Oil Economy
Valerie Zink and Emily Eaton

In the summer of 2014, at the height of the recent oil boom experienced across the northern plains, geographer Emily Eaton and photographer Valerie Zink traveled to Saskatchewan’s booming oil towns, from a seacan motel built from shipping containers on the outskirts of Estevan to seismic testing sites on Thunderchild First Nation’s Sundance grounds. In text and photographs, Fault Lines captures the complexities of engagement, ambivalence, and resistance in communities living amid oil.

Valerie Zink was raised on a dairy farm in the foothills of Alberta. She first turned her attention to photography after moving to southern Saskatchewan in 2010.

Emily Eaton is an associate professor of geography at the University of Regina specializing in political economy and natural resource economies.

Indigenous Homelessness
Perspectives from Canada, Australia, and New Zealand
Edited by Evelyn J. Peters and Julia Christensen

Essays in this collection explore the meaning and scope of Indigenous homelessness in Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. They argue that effective policy and support programs aimed at relieving Indigenous homelessness must be rooted in Indigenous conceptions of home, land, and kinship, and cannot ignore the context of systemic inequality, institutionalization, and landlessness, among other things, that stem from a history of colonialism.

Evelyn J. Peters is an urban social geographer with a research focus on urban First Nations and Métis.

Julia Christensen is a social, cultural, and health geographer, and works primarily with northern Indigenous communities in Canada and Greenland.
Imperial Plots
Women, Land, and the Spadework of British Colonialism on the Canadian Prairies
Sarah Carter

Sarah Carter’s Imperial Plots explores the strategies women drew on to obtain and cultivate land of their own. Heated debates about women farmers touched on issues of ethnicity, race, gender, class, and nation, but despite legal and cultural obstacles, British women acquired land in Canada as homesteaders, farmers, ranchers, and speculators. Imperial Plots depicts the female farmers and ranchers of the prairies, from the Indigenous women agriculturalists of the Plains to the land army women of the First World War.

From the Tundra to the Trenches
Eddy Weetaltuk, edited by Thibault Martin

“My name is Weetaltuk; Eddy Weetaltuk. My Eskimo tag name is E9-422.” So begins From the Tundra to the Trenches. In 1951, Eddy decided to leave James Bay. Because Inuit weren’t allowed to leave the north, he changed his name and used this new identity to join the Canadian Forces. So Edward Weetaltuk, E9-422, became Eddy Vital, SC-17515, and was sent to the Korean War. This compelling memoir traces an Inuk’s experiences of world travel and military service.

Sarah Carter FRSC is professor and Henry Marshall Tory Chair in the Department of History and Classics and the Faculty of Native Studies at the University of Alberta.

Eddy Weetaltuk (1932–2005) was born on Strutton Island, James Bay. He enlisted in the Canadian Army and served in Korea. He left the army in 1967.

Thibault Martin is a sociologist and Canada Research Chair, Aboriginal Governance.

CR: The New Centennial Review

EDITORS: Scott Michaelsen, Michigan State University, and David E. Johnson, SUNY at Buffalo and Universidad Diego Portales, Chile

CR: The New Centennial Review is devoted to comparative studies of the Americas with emphasis on the opening up of the possibilities for a different future. For over fifty years CR has been committed to interdisciplinarity, and encourages work that goes beyond a simple performance of the strategies of various disciplines and interdisciplinary. Articles address philosophically inflected interventions, provocations, and insurgencies that release futures for the Americas. CR recognizes that the language of the Americas is translation, and that questions of translation, dialogue, and border crossings (linguistic, cultural, national, and the like) are necessary for rethinking the foundations and limits of the Americas.

Contagion: Journal of Violence, Mimesis, and Culture

EDITOR: William A. Johnsen, Michigan State University

Contagion is the journal of the Colloquium on Violence and Religion (COV&R), an international group established to pursue the research agenda initiated by René Girard’s mimetic hypothesis. This focus attracts essays by a distinguished international list of contributors from the fields of conflict resolution; theology; Biblical, Hebrew, and Islamic studies; social and biological science; feminism; literary studies in both classical and modern languages; polite and popular culture; art and music; film studies; philosophy; economics; psychology; ecology; pedagogy and educational theory; and rhetoric.
Fourth Genre: Explorations in Nonfiction

EDITOR: Laura Julier, Michigan State University

Fourth Genre is a literary journal devoted to publishing notable, innovative work in creative nonfiction. The journal explores the genre’s flexibility and expansiveness with works ranging from personal essays and memoirs to literary journalism, personal criticism, and graphic or hybrid pieces. FG publishes essays that are lyrical, self-interrogative, meditative, and reflective, as well as expository, analytical, exploratory, or whimsical. In addition to essays, each issue features a substantive review section. The spring issue features winners of the annual literary prize.

French Colonial History

EDITOR: Micheline Lessard, University of Ottawa

French Colonial History is an annual volume of referred, scholarly articles published in cooperation with the French Colonial Historical Society. The journal covers all aspects of French colonizing activity and the history of all French colonies, reflecting the temporal span, geographical breadth, and diversity of subject matter that characterize the scholarly interests of the Society.

Journal for the Study of Radicalism

EDITOR: Arthur Versluis, Michigan State University

Journal for the Study of Radicalism engages in serious, scholarly exploration of the forms, representations, meanings, and historical influences of radical social movements. JSR publishes an eclectic collection of articles ranging broadly across social and political groups worldwide, examining radicalism without dogma or strict political agenda. Articles reconceptualize definitions and theories of radicalism, feature underrepresented radical groups, and introduce new topics and methods of study such as the role of science and technology in radical visions, the transnational and regional understandings of radicalism, and the relationships of radical movements to land and environment.

Journal of West African History

EDITOR: Nwando Achebe, Michigan State University

The Journal of West African History is a new interdisciplinary peer-reviewed research journal that is located at the cutting edge of new scholarship on the social, cultural, economic, and political history of West Africa. JWAH fills a representational gap by providing a forum for serious scholarship and debate on women and gender, sexuality, slavery, oral history, popular and public culture, and religion. Articles explore a wide range of topical, theoretical, methodological, and empirical perspectives in new and exciting ways. Scholarly reviews of current books in the field will appear in every issue.
Northeast African Studies

EDITOR: Lee V. Cassanelli, University of Pennsylvania

Northeast African Studies is a geographically focused interdisciplinary journal that studies the region encompassing the Nile Valley, the Red Sea, and the lands adjacent to both. Focusing on patterns and processes that affect the region as a whole, articles address social sciences, humanities, and rethinking established debates and paradigms in the field with comparative implications for scholars working in other parts of the world by engaging in comparative and transnational studies. Issues are thematic in focus and draw upon new or underutilized source materials and disciplinary methodologies.

QED: A Journal in GLBTQ Worldmaking

EDITORS: Charles E. Morris III, Syracuse University, and Thomas K. Nakayama, Northeastern University

QED: A Journal in GLBTQ Worldmaking ventures to bring together scholars, activists, public intellectuals, policy makers, artists, and other cultural producers to explore issues that matter to the diverse lived experience, struggle, and transformation of GLBTQ peoples wherever they may be. With an emphasis on worldmaking praxis, QED mobilizes public argument, theory, criticism, and history through its published essays, commentaries, interviews, roundtable discussions, and event, performance, and book reviews.

Real Analysis Exchange

EDITOR: Paul D. Humke, St. Olaf College

Real Analysis Exchange is a biannual refereed mathematics journal that covers real analysis and related subjects such as geometric measure theory, analytic set theory, one-dimensional dynamics, the topology of real functions, and the real variable aspects of Fourier analysis and complex analysis. The first issue of each volume year features conference reports, now available electronically only, at no cost, at http://msupress.msu.edu/journals/raex or through Project Euclid. The second issue includes survey articles.

Rhetoric & Public Affairs

EDITOR: Martin J. Medhurst, Baylor University

Rhetoric & Public Affairs is an interdisciplinary journal devoted to the history, theory, and criticism of public discourse. Published quarterly, the journal explores the traditional arenas of rhetorical investigation including executive leadership, diplomacy, political campaigns, judicial and legislative deliberations, and public policy debate. Of special interest are manuscripts that explore the nexus of rhetoric, politics, and ethics—the worlds of persuasion, power, and social values as they meet in the crucible of public debate and deliberation.
