30% DISCOUNT

Save 30% and get free US shipping with promo code AFRICA23

AT ASA IN SAN FRANCISCO
Visit booth 307 for 30% off all books on display. Credit or debit cards only.

WEB ORDERS IN US/CANADA
Enter promo code AFRICA23 on our website shopping cart for 30% off and free US shipping on African studies books at OHIOSWALLOW.COM

WEB ORDERS OUTSIDE US/CANADA
Use promo code AFRICA23 for 30% off African studies books at COMBINEDACADEMIC.CO.UK

Offer valid November 27–December 8

For sales questions, please contact Ohio University Press sales and events manager Jeff Kallet at kallet@ohio.edu.

Since its founding in 2004, New African Histories has redefined the field of African history. Books in this series bring the practice of history to unlikely places, ask unsettling questions, and adopt unorthodox methodologies. We welcome history written “from below,” but we also encourage work from other angles: histories of therapies; forms and aesthetics; political traditions; and technologies that are less frequently the subject of historical analysis.

In this series, environmental and urban histories live side by side with histories of slavery, migration, and labor. World, comparative, diaspora, and border histories sit next to media and art histories. Economic and modernization histories are published alongside histories of gender and sexuality; race and ethnicity; nationality and citizenship; and generation and class. Capacious in their analytical and thematic scope, books in the New African Histories series reach across the very categories that define them.

In recent years the series has expanded its remit to include groundbreaking work on aesthetics, visual culture, and art history. Published in a larger format and generously illustrated, these books allow readers to see history in new ways. As we continue to reflect the dynamism of our field, we also aim to push it in new directions by publishing works that challenge the conventions that continue to shape the field. Imperative to this mission is our commitment to publishing the cutting-edge work of historians based at African institutions; manuscripts by first-time authors; and the work of established scholars who are breaking new ground. Ohio University Press is proud of its relationships with a number of African presses that copublish affordable editions of many of its African studies titles.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.
Apartheid’s Leviathan
Electricity and the Power of Technological Ambivalence
FAEEZA BALLIM

“Ballim powerfully revises existing accounts of state power in South Africa and speaks to urgent questions of energy politics and democratization in the present.”
— Antina von Schnitzler, author of Democracy’s Infrastructure: Techno-Politics and Protest after Apartheid

Unruly Ideas
A History of Kitawala in Congo
NICOLE EGGERS

“Nicole Eggers has written an engaging, original, and important account of the Kitawalist religious movement in the Democratic Republic of Congo, from the 1930s to recent times, packed with the results of years of archival and oral research.”
— David M. Gordon, author of Invisible Agents: Spirits in a Central African History

A Country of Defiance
Mapping the Casamance in Senegal
MARK W. DEETS

“A Country of Defiance is an invaluable contribution to our understanding of the origins of the Casamance conflict. It’s a well-researched and accessible book that should figure prominently in the library of anybody interested in the postcolonial history of Senegal.”
— Cheikh Anta Babou, author of The Muridiyya on the Move: Islam, Migration, and Place Making
The objective of the Africa in World History series is to publish accessible books written for an audience that may know relatively little about the continent, in contrast to narrowly focused monographs intended for specialists in the field. Series books feature familiar topics, such as soccer, cuisine, diamonds, or slavery, but in an African context and in a way that draws readers into substantive engagement with the complex histories of Africa and its peoples. Some books examine a single topic as it unfolds across the continent, while others focus on a particular setting or region to illustrate broader developments and dynamics. The volumes challenge common misunderstandings and misperceptions about Africa’s past and its connection to the present, while adhering to rigorous standards of scholarship to ensure responsible handling of the histories they explore.

Books in the series speak to current images of Africa in popular culture, making them ideal texts for African and world history courses and for other classes that seek to reflect more accurate understandings of Africa. They are especially useful for undergraduate and graduate instruction; for training foreign service, NGO, and media personnel; and for readers interested in deepening and expanding their knowledge of Africa’s interlinked past, present, and future.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

A History of Tourism in Africa

Exoticization, Exploitation, and Enrichment

Todd Cleveland

“A seminal and meticulously presented study ... [and] an inherently fascinating and impressively informative history. Exceptionally well written, organized and presented.”

— Midwest Book Review
African Religions, Social Realities is a new series dedicated to rigorous research attuned to how religious sensibilities shape, inform, and transform African lived experiences. The series focuses on the embeddedness of religious beliefs in material conditions and transformations—in ethical practices, gender negotiations, economic activities, political expressions, justice work, and other spheres. These books will reject narrow framings of religion in all senses—confessional, disciplinary, secularist, and geographical. This series also seeks to expand our understanding of African diasporas and religious connectivities in regions that have received less focus than the well-studied Atlantic world: namely, the Mediterranean, Middle East, Northern Africa, Indian Ocean, Persian Gulf, Asia, and the Pacific.

We welcome proposals from any discipline and across disciplines, including those that bridge language divides. This series has also been conceived to confront inequalities stemming from knowledge production centered in the West that tends to preclude scholars in the Global South, women, and early-career authors. The series editors are especially eager to receive book proposals that reflect global crises and urgent humanitarian priorities as they intersect with religions: inequality, justice mobilizations, death, care, food and water, race, and labor. Other themes may include but are not limited to traditional and neotraditional belief systems, transoceanic and diasporic religious movements, interreligious relations, gender, sexuality, and reformism. Theological studies narrowly defined, textual exegesis, and translations may be considered but must clearly demonstrate fit with the series aims.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.
Everyday State and Democracy in Africa

Ethnographic Encounters

WALE ADEBANWI, ED.

Bottom-up case studies, drawn from the perspective of ordinary Africans’ experiences with state bureaucracies, structures, and services, reveal how citizens and states define each other.

“Should be on the core reading list of every course on state and democracy, in Africa and beyond.”

— Thomas Bierschenk, coeditor of States at Work: Dynamics of African Bureaucracies
“The importance of this field of studies has finally been recognized: the new Indian Ocean Studies Series . . . represents a strong move towards new studies on people with no voice, of new inter- and intradisciplinary reconstructions and interpretations of a still under-researched area.” — Canadian Journal of African Studies

The Indian Ocean, once largely ignored by scholars, is now the focus of research that is transforming our understanding of this oceanic world’s past and present and its place in global history.

This series offers established and younger scholars from anthropology, archeology, economics, geography, history, political science, and sociology the opportunity to publish conceptually and methodologically innovative studies on topics such as human migration, cultural and religious diversity, trade and commerce, imperialism and colonialism, and globalization.

By encouraging interdisciplinary and comparative approaches to social, economic, political, and cultural interactions within and beyond the Indian Ocean, in both the past and the present, the series’ monographs and edited collections make significant contributions to our understanding about the nature and dynamics of regional and panregional change.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

Ethnicity, Identity, and Conceptualizing Community in Indian Ocean East Africa

DAREN E. RAY

“A fascinating, thought-provoking, genre-bending study. This book charts new territory for Indian Ocean and East African Studies, incorporating influences from both land and sea across time, while centering vernacular cultures and politics.”

— Bettina Ng’weno, Universit of California, Davis
OHIO UNIVERSITY PRESS SERIES

MODERN African Writing

SERIES EDITOR
AINEHI EDORO

The Modern African Writing series brings the best African writing to an international audience. These groundbreaking novels, memoirs, and other literary works showcase the most talented writers of the African continent. The series also features works of significant historical and literary value translated into English for the first time. Moderately priced, the books chosen for the series are well crafted, original, and ideally suited for African studies classes, world literature classes, or any reader looking for compelling voices of diverse African perspectives.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

Fine Boys
A Novel
EGHOSIA IMASUEN

“Eghosa Imasuen writes fearlessly and beautifully of friendship, love, loss, and betrayal. [The novel] is thought-provoking, perfectly paced, uniformly delightful, compassionate, full of humor, but also heartbreaking. Eghosa Imasuen has remarkable gifts.”
— Chika Unigwe, author of On Black Sisters Street
Ohio Short Histories of Africa is a series of informative and concise guides, lively biographies, and succinct introductions to important topics in African history.

“I am a huge fan of Ohio University Press’s Ohio Short Histories of Africa series. I use them to teach my introductory-level African politics students about oppression, resistance, liberation and corruption, and I recommend the books to anyone who asks as an affordable and accessible introduction to a wide range of topics in African studies.”
— Laura Seay, Washington Post

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

African Activists of the Twentieth Century
Hani, Maathai, Mpama/Palmer, Saro-Wiwa

HUGH MACMILLAN, TABITHA KANOGO, ROBERT R. EDGAR, ROY DORON, AND TOYIN FALOLA

Four books in one, this omnibus edition brings together concise and up-to-date biographies of Chris Hani, Wangari Maathai, Josie Mpama/Palmer, and Ken Saro-Wiwa to complement courses in history and political science.
This series publishes innovative studies that draw upon perspectives from the natural sciences and social sciences to shed light on important issues in global public health. The books in Perspectives on Global Health interest students and practitioners and are appropriate for adoption in undergraduate and graduate courses in global public health.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

The Histories of HIVs
The Emergence of the Multiple Viruses That Caused the AIDS Epidemics

WILLIAM H. SCHNEIDER, ED.

“This impressive volume, which combines historical epidemiology and anthropology with the main achievements of virology and immunology, contributes to our understanding of the ways some HIV viruses provoked epidemics or became pandemic. . . . A brilliant achievement that is a pleasure to read.”

— Kalala Ngalamulume, coeditor of Medicine and Health in Africa: Multidisciplinary Perspectives
RESEARCH IN INTERNATIONAL STUDIES, AFRICA SERIES

SERIES EDITOR
THOMAS SMUCKER

This series of publications on Africa is designed to present significant research, translation, and opinion to area specialists and to a wide community of persons interested in world affairs. The editors seek manuscripts of quality in a wide range of disciplines. The editor works closely with authors to produce a high-quality book. The series, published in association with the Center for International Studies at Ohio University, appears in paperback format and is distributed worldwide.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLES

Afrofuturisms
Ecology, Humanity, and Francophone Cultural Expression
ISAAC VINCENT JOSLIN

“A sophisticated and compelling investigation of Afrofuturism as an alternative discourse for imagining (and potentially building) a fairer world.”
— Vlad Dima, author of The Beautiful Skin: Football, Fantasy, and Cinematic Bodies in Africa

Power, Patronage, and the Local State in Ghana
BARRY DRISCOLL

“This is one of the best books written on political parties in Africa in the last decade.”
— Nic Cheeseman, author of Democracy in Africa: Successes, Failures, and the Struggle for Political Reform
This series aims to provide stimulating, thoughtful, and provocative academic studies that focus on the experience of people outside Europe and North America or that include Western and non-Western countries and regions in comparative studies of the global experience. The series looks for high-quality manuscripts in the social sciences and the humanities.

All books in the series are published in association with the Center for International Studies at Ohio University.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLES

Hip-Hop in Africa
Prophets of the City and Dustyfoot Philosophers
MSIA KIBONA CLARK

“Highly recommended for popular cultural scholars, hip-hop heads, and the cultural producers in hip-hop communities.”
— Contemporary Journal of African Studies

Making a World after Empire
The Bandung Moment and Its Political Afterlives
CHRISTOPHER J. LEE, ED.

“This splendid collection . . . is transnational, postcolonial, and, even more important, exciting history that speaks to our complex political present.”
— Marilyn B. Young, author of Iraq and the Lessons of Vietnam
This series publishes important regional and subregional studies of global and comparative environmental history. The editor seeks to publish the best of emerging literature on the environmental history of the wider world.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

Environment, Power, and Justice
Southern African Histories

GRAEME WYNN, JANE CARRUTHERS, AND NANCY J. JACOBS, EDS.

“This is a must-read volume for everyone interested in environmental justice, not only in the Southern African context, but also on the African continent and globally.”
— Phia Steyn, University of Stirling
The Series in Human Security concerns itself with the lived experience of people in zones of conflict as well as with theoretical and methodological innovations in the field.

Broad categories of interest include

- Human security as a conceptual framework: trends, challenges, and prospects,
- Food security: malnutrition, food deserts, conflict-driven famine,
- Economic security: access to resources, neocolonialism, large-scale economic crises, microfinance, poverty, corruption, inequality, politics of development and international aid,
- Health security: infectious diseases, access to health services, water and sanitation, health and conflict,
- Environmental security: climate change, natural resource distribution, pollution, geography of conflict,
- Personal security: crime, smuggling, human trafficking, refugees and asylum seekers, gender and conflict,
- Community security: ethnic conflict, religious conflict, minority rights, race and discrimination, genocide, humanitarian/military interventions, postconflict justice, population displacement, and
- Political security: human rights, discrimination, systematic torture, repression, disappearances, courts and tribunals, truth and reconciliation, fragile or failed states.

The Series in Human Security is published in association with Ohio University’s War and Peace Studies and African Studies programs at the Center for International Studies and the Environmental Studies Program at the Voinovich School of Leadership and Public Affairs.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.
Violent conflict, climate change, and poverty present distinct threats to women worldwide. Importantly, women are leading the way creating and sharing sustainable solutions.

This multidisciplinary collection examines women’s security threats stemming from conflict, environmental policy, and economic limitations, as well as the growing repertoire of grass-roots solutions women are creating, demanding, and sharing throughout the world to increase their security.

Carment and Samy investigate the dynamics of state transitions in fragile contexts, with a focus on states trapped in fragility. They consider fragility’s evolution in trapped countries; in those that move in and out of it; and in those that have exited it, thus taking a major step toward a new theory of the so-called fragility trap.

“This excellently researched book and the authors’ accessible writing style make it of keen interest and relevance for the academic research and foreign policy communities alike.”

The books in this series explore conflict and the quest for justice as catalysts for social change. Intended for use in graduate and undergraduate courses, the books highlight a key concept or theory and use it to illuminate conflict in a domestic or international setting. The series will include single-case studies and comparative analyses as well as edited volumes dedicated to conflict pedagogy. Roleplays and other experiential learning exercises designed for classroom use with the books will be available electronically. The books will be appropriate for courses in interdisciplinary fields, such as conflict resolution, peace studies, sociolegal and justice studies, and related social sciences. Individual texts will appeal to instructors teaching specialized subjects, including, among others, environment, development, community organizing, human security, leadership, legal integration, sustainability, diplomacy, and immigration.

The series editors are based at the Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter School for Peace and Conflict Resolution at George Mason University, which provides material support for the publication of books in this series. To learn more about the Carter School, please visit carterschool.gmu.edu.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

RECENT TITLE

Research as More Than Extraction

Knowledge Production and Gender-Based Violence in African Societies

ANNIE BUNTING, ALLEN KICONCO, AND JOEL QUIRK, EDS.

This book contributes to the interdisciplinary field that focuses on ethics, methods, and the politics of gender-based violence. Its contributors, the majority of whom are based in Africa, offer concrete examples of how to undertake responsible research in African contexts.
War and Militarism in African History is the first book series dedicated to examining the politico-economic, sociocultural, and military dimensions of Africa’s past and continuing conflicts. While armed combat and other forms of violence are part of the social experience of large segments of the continent’s population, little of the scholarship published today recognizes the deep roots of these contemporary conflicts or describes them in the larger context in which they occur. In contrast, the War and Militarism in African History series editors seek works by scholars employing war-and-society approaches, in which the study of developments on the battlefield is interwoven with broader social trends and dynamics. The series also welcomes works that historicize militarism or antimilitarist movements as a corrective to the presentism that now prevails in the field.

The series includes monographs, broad syntheses with teaching potential at the graduate or undergraduate levels, and edited collections by both emerging and established scholars. It also aspires to bridge the gap between scholarly readers and nonspecialists in the field.

The series editors particularly encourage submissions from Africa-based scholars, whose voices too often go unheard for lack of publishing opportunities. One of the driving objectives of the series is to address this imbalance.

Prospective authors should direct inquiries or submit proposals to editor in chief and acquisitions editor Ricky S. Huard at huard@ohio.edu.

FORTHCOMING

Making Martial Races
Gender, Society, and Warfare in Africa

MYLES OSBORNE, ED.

“An enormous contribution to our understanding of the function and form of colonial armies in Africa, as well as of their socioeconomic, cultural, and political impacts.”

— Richard Reid, University of Oxford
Ohio University Press gladly supplies complimentary examination copies to instructors considering our books for classes. On any book’s webpage at ohioswallow.com, please fill out the examination copy request form in exchange for a pdf.

Questions? Please contact Jeff Kallet at kallet@ohio.edu.
CONGRATULATIONS

WINNER
AIDOO-SNYDER BOOK PRIZE
AFRICAN STUDIES ASSOCIATION
WOMEN’S CAUCUS

JUDITH A. BYFIELD

The Great Upheaval
Women and Nation in Postwar Nigeria
NEW AFRICAN HISTORIES

FINALIST
BETHWELL A. OGOT PRIZE
AFRICAN STUDIES ASSOCIATION

HOLLY HANSON

To Speak and Be Heard
Seeking Good Government in Uganda, ca. 1500–2015
NEW AFRICAN HISTORIES

HONORABLE MENTION,
AIDOO-SNYDER BOOK PRIZE
AFRICAN STUDIES ASSOCIATION
WOMEN’S CAUCUS

LAURA ANN TWAGIRA

Embodied Engineering
Gendered Labor, Food Security, and
Taste in Twentieth Century Mali
NEW AFRICAN HISTORIES

WINNER, MARTIN A. KLEIN PRIZE
AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION

PAUL S. LANDAU

Spear
Mandela and the Revolutionaries
NEW AFRICAN HISTORIES
Please join us in celebrating

JEAN ALLMAN

on her retirement from the New African Histories series editorial board.

In 2003, Dr. Allman cofounded, along with Dr. Allen F. Isaacman, our award-winning, flagship African studies series. She has served as a series editor for the past twenty years.

Upon her retirement from the board, all of us at Ohio University Press express our deepest gratitude for Dr. Allman’s tireless work on behalf of the series and its authors. We wish her all the best with her future endeavors.