

CONTRIBUTORS

---

Stanley Arnold is an associate professor of history at Northern Illinois University and author of Building the Beloved Community: Philadelphia's Interracial Civil Rights Organizations, 1930–1970 (2014).

William V. Bartleson is a professor of history at Moore College and Delval University. His areas of concentration are nineteenth-century American history and historical methodology.

Jacqueline Beatty is an assistant professor of history at York College of Pennsylvania and author of In Dependence: Women and the Patriarchal State in Revolutionary America (2023).

Jean-Pierre Beugoms is a military historian and superforecaster who holds a Ph.D. in history from Temple University.

Kelli Billings holds a master's degree in history from West Chester University, where she works in special collections. Her research centers on early printed books.

Jake Blumgart is a reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Seth C. Bruggeman is a professor of history at Temple University and author of Lost on the Freedom Trail: The National Park Service and Urban Renewal in Postwar Boston (2022).

Stephen Burciaga is a Ph.D. candidate in history at the University of Buffalo.

Will Caverly is an author living in southeastern Pennsylvania, writing about history and the outdoors. His work can be found on his website, <https://willcaverly.com/>.

Nathaniel Conley is a lecturer in the African and African American Studies Department at the University of Arkansas.

Vibiana Bowman Cvetkovic (Ph.D., childhood studies) is a librarian emerita of Rutgers University. She specializes in popular culture, critical-thinking skills, and intellectual honesty.

Lucy Davis is a research and digital publishing assistant for The Encyclopedia of Greater Philadelphia.

Michael DiCamillo has worked for the University of Pennsylvania, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and the Hagley Museum and Library as an archivist and librarian.

Andrew Diemer is an associate professor of history at Towson University and author of Vigilance: The Life of William Still, Father of the Underground Railroad (2022).

Jeffery M. Dorwart is Professor Emeritus of History at Rutgers University. He has written extensively on the community and military histories of Greater Philadelphia.

Shannon E. Duffy, Ph.D., is senior lecturer at Texas State University. Her book manuscript is titled “Defiantly Neutral: The Deep Roots of Quaker Pacifism in Pennsylvania.”

Madison Eggert-Crowe has her master’s in public administration from the University of Pennsylvania and is vice president of political affairs for Comcast.

Jordan AP Fansler is a professor at Great Bay Community College in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, where he uses history and archaeology to study the Atlantic world at its local levels.

Hannah Farber, an assistant professor of history at Columbia University, is the author of Underwriters of the United States: How Insurance Shaped the American Founding (2021).

Siobhan Fitzpatrick has worked with history organizations in New Jersey and at Valley Forge National Historical Park.

Gwendolyn Fowler is a Ph.D. student at Rutgers University, where she studies African American history. Her dissertation focuses on welfare rights in Detroit.

Tamara Gaskell is an editor of The Selected Papers of Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony (vols. 1 and 2, 1997 and 2000) and of Women Making History: The 19th Amendment (2020).

Holly Genovese is a Ph.D. candidate in American studies at the University of Texas and studies southern Black art forms as a resistance to incarceration.

James Gigantino is a professor of history at the University of Arkansas whose books include The Ragged Road to Abolition: Slavery and Freedom in New Jersey, 1775–1865 (2014).

Patrick Grubbs is the associate dean of arts, humanities, and social sciences and professor of history at Northampton Community College in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Brian Hendricks holds a master’s degree in political science and is a doctoral candidate in history (early American emphasis) from Southern Illinois University.

John Hepp is Emeritus Professor of History at Wilkes University, and he writes on social, economic, and technological change in urban settings since 1700.

Lucien Holness is an assistant professor of history at Virginia Tech.

Laura M. Holzman is a professor of art history and museum studies and public scholar of curatorial practices and visual art at Indiana University Indianapolis.

Ricardo Howell works in academic affairs in arts and sciences at the University of Pennsylvania. He researches African American history, culture, and community formation.

Jennifer Lawrence Janofsky is the Megan Giordano Fellow in Public History at Rowan University and the director of Red Bank Battlefield Park.

Ann K. Johnson is Associate University Librarian for Publishing, Preservation, Research, and Digital Access at the University of Delaware.

Elise Kammerer received her Ph.D. in American history from the University of Cologne. Her interests include free Black education and the early national antislavery movement.

Michael Karpyn, Ph.D., teaches government and economics at Marple Newtown Senior High School and is editor of Teaching the Causes of the American Civil War, 1850–1861 (2020).

Hillary S. Kativa is an archivist in the Greater Philadelphia region and holds graduate degrees in history and library science from Villanova and Rutgers University.

Daniel T. Kirsch received his Ph.D. from the University of Massachusetts Amherst and is a professor of political science at Northern Virginia Community College.

Scott Gabriel Knowles is a professor in the Graduate School of Science and Technology Policy at the Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST) and author/editor of six books.

Robert J. Kodosky, Ph.D., is a history professor at West Chester University and author of Tuskegee in Philadelphia: Rising to the Challenge (2020).

Joanna Kolendo is an associate professor of library and information services at Chicago State University and works as a research, instruction, and electronic resources librarian.

James Kopaczewski received his Ph.D. in United States history from Temple University in 2022.

Emily Krichbaum is an Ohio-based historian who has published work on the Gray Panthers, Frederick Douglass, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, and the Older Women's League.

Stuart Leibiger, a specialist in Revolutionary, early national, and Civil War history, is a professor and history department chair at La Salle University.

Michael A. Martorelli is Director Emeritus at the investment banking firm Fairmount Partners in Radnor and a frequent contributor to Financial History magazine.

Jack McCarthy is an archivist and historian who specializes in three areas of Philadelphia history: music, business and industry, and Northeast Philadelphia.

Amanda McClain is an associate professor of communications at American Public University. Her research interests include reality TV, social media, and celebrities.

Jordan McClain, Ph.D. (Temple University, mass media and communication), is an independent scholar and former president of the Mid-Atlantic Popular and American Culture Association.

Steven McGrail holds graduate degrees in history and is a managing editor at Wiley. He lives with his wife and son in North Carolina.

Laura Michel holds a Ph.D. in history from Rutgers University. Her work considers the intersection of philanthropy, reform, and identity in the early American republic.

Charlene Mires is a professor of history at Rutgers University–Camden and editor-in-chief of The Encyclopedia of Greater Philadelphia.

Ed Moorhouse is Director of Media and Communications at Ursinus College and is responsible for a team that oversees the office's communications responsibilities.

Virginia Mulligan is a graduate of Longwood University (2019) and West Chester University (2021). She is a history graduate student at Rutgers University–Camden.

Gary B. Nash was Professor of History Emeritus at UCLA and author of many books, including First City: Philadelphia and the Forging of Historical Memory (2002).

Richard S. Newman is a professor of history at Rochester Institute of Technology. His current book project is "American Emancipations: The Making and Unmaking of Black Freedom, 1619–Present."

Toni Pitock is an assistant teaching professor of history and Jewish studies at Drexel University.

David Reader is a history teacher at Haddonfield Memorial High School and volunteers at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the Historical Society of Haddonfield.

Sarah E. Robey is an associate professor of history at Idaho State University. Robey's research focuses on the history of nuclear science and civic participation.

Martha K. Robinson, Ph.D., is an associate professor of history at PennWest Clarion University, where she teaches classes on early America and the American Revolution.

Mabel Rosenheck is the director of education and exhibition planning at LancasterHistory.

Dan Royles is an associate professor of history at Florida International University. He authored To Make the Wounded Whole: The African American Struggle Against HIV/AIDS (2020).

John Saillant is a professor of English and history at Western Michigan University. His work has appeared as essays, books, and edited documents since 1992.

Jim Saksa is a journalist who considers Philadelphia home no matter where life takes him.

Cody Schreck serves as Executive Director of the Ephraim Historical Foundation in Wisconsin and is a descendant of a long line of Greater Philadelphians.

Roger D. Simon is Emeritus Professor of History at Lehigh University. He is the author of Philadelphia: A Brief History (2003, revised edition, 2017) and has also written on Milwaukee and Pittsburgh.

John E. Smith III is a 2018 graduate from Temple University's Center for Public History. He is the archivist at the Chester County Archives.

Robert F. Smith is Provost at Valley Forge Military College and author of the book Manufacturing Independence: Industrial Innovation in the American Revolution (2016).

Matthew J. Soderblom is a Ph.D. student at Temple University, where he specializes in nineteenth-century American literature and frontier literature.

Jean R. Soderlund is Professor of History Emeritus at Lehigh University. Her books include Lenape Country: Delaware Valley Society Before William Penn (2015).

Alexandra Jordan Thelin is a fashion historian whose work combines fashion, popular culture, and art history. She works in digital marketing and communications.

Beverly C. Tomek is the author of Slavery and Abolition in Pennsylvania (2021).

Coxey Toogood is a historian, formerly in the Cultural Resources Management Division of Independence National Historical Park.

Andrew T. Tremel is an independent researcher and public historian at the U.S. Capitol Visitor Center.

Martin W. Wilson is Emeritus Professor of History at East Stroudsburg University. He taught United States, Pennsylvania, urban, and Latin American history before retiring after twenty-two years of teaching.

Stephanie Grauman Wolf, retired professor of history, was director of the Winterthur Program and the McNeil Center for Early American Studies.

James Wolfinger is Dean of the School of Education at St. John's University. He is the author of Philadelphia Divided: Race & Politics in the City of Brotherly Love (2007) and Running the Rails: Capital and Labor in the Philadelphia Transit Industry (2016).

James J. Wyatt, Ph.D., is Director of Programs and Research at the Robert C. Byrd Center for Legislative Studies.

Megan C. McGee Yinger earned her American studies degrees from La Salle University (B.A.) and Penn State Harrisburg (M.A., Ph.D.).

Theodore Zeman is an adjunct professor of history at Saint Joseph's University and at Penn State University Abington and author of various Civil War era studies.

Melissa Ziobro is the specialist professor of public history at Monmouth University. She served as a command historian at Fort Monmouth from 2004 to 2011.