

CONTRIBUTORS

Guy Aiken has a Ph.D. in religious studies from the University of Virginia, where he is currently a lecturer in interdisciplinary studies.

Elizabeth Hayes Alvarez, Ph.D., received her degree in religion from the University of Chicago. She heads the Learning Fellows Program and facilitates meaningful learning across a range of classrooms.

Daniel Amsterdam is a professor of history at the Georgia Institute of Technology.

Annie Anderson is an American studies Ph.D. student at Rutgers–Newark. She has worked for Eastern State Penitentiary Historic Site and the Rikers Public Memory Project.

William V. Bartleson is an independent scholar of military history who has worked with the New Jersey National Guard Militia Museum and the Center for Veterans Oral History.

James M. Bergquist was Professor Emeritus of History, Villanova University.

Gretchen E. Boger is Director of Curriculum and Instruction and an upper-school history teacher at the Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

Paul Campbell works for the National Park Service as special events coordinator at Independence National Historical Park. He has an M.A. in history from Temple University.

Augustin Cerveaux is an independent scholar and former fellow of the Chemical Heritage Foundation.

Sarah Chesney completed her Ph.D. in anthropology in 2014 and is currently the staff archaeologist at San Felipe de Austin State Historic Site in San Felipe, Texas.

Peter Cole is a professor of history at Western Illinois University and a research associate in the Society, Work & Politics Institute, University of the Witwatersrand.

Nathaniel Conley received his Ph.D. from the University of Arkansas. His research focuses on Maryland and Pennsylvania with emphasis on the lower class and the border between slavery and freedom.

Danielle Podwats D'Amelio is an educator with an M.A. in English and media studies from Rutgers University–Camden and a B.A. in both English and education from Rowan University.

Saanika Jeet Dhillon is a graduate fellow at Syracuse University studying museum studies. She received an M.A. in American history and a B.A. in history.

Jeffery M. Dorwart is Professor Emeritus of History, Rutgers University, and has authored many works on local, military, and naval history in the Greater Philadelphia region.

Jacob Downs was born and raised in Philadelphia's Far Northeast. He holds degrees in American history and political science and earned his master's in gender perception during Philadelphia's industrial past.

Christian DuComb, Ph.D., is an associate professor of theater at Colgate University and author of Haunted City: Three Centuries of Racial Impersonation in Philadelphia (2017).

Lance Eisenhower is a public history professional in the Greater Philadelphia region and has a master's degree in history from Villanova University.

David Elesh is emeritus faculty in sociology at Temple University. He has written widely on industrial change and its consequences.

Herbert Ershkowitz was Professor of History Emeritus at Temple University.

Simon Finger is author of The Contagious City: The Politics of Public Health in Early Philadelphia (2012) and teaches the history of colonial North America and the history of medicine at The College of New Jersey.

Levi Fox, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of history in the Department of Civic Engagement at Immaculata University and the owner of Jersey Shore Tours.

Gail Friedman is a writer and city planner and earned a master's degree in public history at Temple University.

Reena Sigman Friedman, Ph.D., is an associate professor of modern Jewish history at Reconstructionist Rabbinical College and an adjunct professor at Gratz College.

Michael Goode is an associate professor of history at Utah Valley University. His teaching and research focus on early American history in an Atlantic World and indigenous context.

Patrick Grubbs is Associate Dean of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences and a professor of history at Northampton Community College in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

R. Scott Hanson is a senior scholar in urban history and material culture in the Department of History and Lenfest Center for Cultural Partnerships at Drexel University.

Charles Hardy III is a former professor of history at West Chester University of Pennsylvania and supervising historian of ExplorePAhistory.com.

Christina Afia Harris earned her Ph.D. from the Department of Africology and Africana Studies at Temple University. Her essay is derived from her research and her personal experience as an ODUNDE participant.

Andrew Heath studied in London and Philadelphia and now teaches at the University of Sheffield in the United Kingdom. He is the author of In Union There Is Strength: Philadelphia in the Age of Urban Consolidation (2019).

Carola Hein is a professor of history of architecture and urban planning, Delft University of Technology, a professor at Leiden and Erasmus University, and UNESCO Chair in Water, Ports and Historic Cities.

Monica Henry is Associate Professor Emerita at Université Paris Est-Créteil. She is currently co-project director and editor of The Papers of William Short.

John Hepp is Professor of History Emeritus at Wilkes University, and his focus is urban cultural history in the period 1600 to the present.

Timothy Kent Holliday is an early American historian of the body. He teaches in the Critical Writing Program at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mark Jaffe is a journalist focused on energy and environmental issues. He has worked for the Philadelphia Inquirer, Bloomberg News, Denver Post, and Colorado Sun.

Hillary S. Kativa is an archivist in the Greater Philadelphia region and holds graduate degrees in history and library science from Villanova and Rutgers University.

Lawrence H. Kessler holds a Ph.D. in history from Temple University and is a postdoctoral fellow at the Consortium for History of Science, Technology, and Medicine.

Robert J. Kodosky, Ph.D., is a history professor at West Chester University and author of Tuskegee in Philadelphia: Rising to the Challenge (2020).

Paul A. Kopacz was employed by United Parcel Service for thirty years. He received his B.A. from Temple University in 2004 and his M.A. in history from Villanova University in 2016.

James Kopaczewski received his Ph.D. in United States history from Temple University in 2022.

Julianne Kornacki is a doctoral student in political science with an interest in the history of municipal and neighborhood politics in Philadelphia.

David M. Krueger earned his Ph.D. in religion from Temple University and is a historian of American religion serving as executive director of the Dialogue Institute.

Anne E. Krulikowski, Ph.D., teaches American history and public history at West Chester University. She has published a history of West Chester University and on urban topics.

Christina Larocco is editor of the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography and scholarly programs manager at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Demian Larry is a Ph.D. candidate in American history at Temple University. His dissertation is about the politics and economics of airport development in Philadelphia.

Jessica Linker is an assistant professor of history at Northeastern University and co-director of Huskiana Press.

Tehyun Ma is a lecturer in global history at the University of Sheffield. She previously studied at the University of Pennsylvania and Bristol University.

Dianna Marder retired in 2012 after twenty-seven years as a staff writer at the Philadelphia Inquirer, where she wrote about the courts, crime, and the cultural impact of food.

Isaac Barnes May is a student at Yale Law School. He earned his Ph.D. in religious studies from the University of Virginia.

Jack McCarthy is an archivist and historian specializing in Philadelphia music, industry, and Northeast Philadelphia. He regularly writes, lectures, gives tours, curates exhibits, and directs projects on these topics.

Marie Basile McDaniel is an associate professor of history at Southern Connecticut State University. Her essay was based on her dissertation, “‘We Shall Not Differ in Heaven’: Marriage, Order and Identity in Eighteenth-Century Philadelphia” (2010).

James R. McIntyre has been researching and writing on the Seven Years’ War and American War of Independence for over twenty years.

Andrew McNally received his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in 2017. His dissertation explored the history of the international understanding movement in U.S. education.

Charlene Mires is a professor of history at Rutgers–Camden and editor-in-chief of The Encyclopedia of Greater Philadelphia.

Nicholas Trajano Molnar teaches history in Philadelphia and is author of American Mestizos, the Philippines, and the Malleability of Race, 1898–1961 (2017).

Molly Nebiolo is an assistant professor of history at Butler University. Her book project examines health and city spaces in the colonial Anglo-Atlantic world.

Stephen Nepa teaches history at Temple University and Moore College of Art and Design. A contributor to numerous books and journals, he lives in Philadelphia.

Dael A. Norwood is a historian and the author of Trading Freedom: How Trade with China Defined Early America (2022).

John B. Osborne, Ph.D., is Emeritus Professor of History at Millersville State University of Pennsylvania and founding director of the University Honors Program.

Steven J. Peitzman is a professor of medicine at Drexel University. His historical work includes A New and Untried Course: Woman's Medical College and Medical College of Pennsylvania, 1850–1998 (2000).

Leonard Norman Primiano was a professor of religious studies at Cabrini University. He codeveloped “The Father Divine Project,” an online research database and multimedia interpretive documentary about the Peace Mission Movement.

David Reader is a history teacher at Haddonfield Memorial High School in New Jersey and volunteers at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the Historical Society of Haddonfield.

Mary Rizzo is an associate professor of history at Rutgers University–Newark. She is the author of two books and a founder of the Chicory Revitalization Project.

Mabel Rosenheck is Director of Education and Exhibition Planning at LancasterHistory.

Molly Roth was a nonprofit administrator in Philadelphia with an interest in the cultural anthropology of Mande West Africa. She was founding executive director of the Global Philadelphia Association.

Evan Rothera is an associate professor of history at the University of Arkansas–Fort Smith and author of Civil Wars and Reconstructions in the Americas (2022).

Dan Royles is an associate professor of history at Florida International University. He is the author of To Make the Wounded Whole: The African American Struggle against HIV/AIDS (2021).

Francis Ryan is a labor educator at Rutgers University’s School of Management and Labor Relations. He has written extensively on Philadelphia labor and working-class history.

Rosina McAvoy Ryan teaches in the Department of History at La Salle University. She earned her Ph.D. at Temple University, where her dissertation examined the College Settlement of Philadelphia.

John Saillant is a professor of English and history at Western Michigan University. His writings have appeared as essays, books, and edited documents since 1992.

Barbara Klaczynska Schmidt, Ph.D., has degrees from Holy Family University, University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee, and Temple University. She studies women, ethnic, and urban history with a particular focus on Philadelphia.

Zachary M. Schrag is the author of The Fires of Philadelphia: Citizen-Soldiers, Nativists, and the 1844 Riots Over the Soul of a Nation (2021).

Grace Schultz earned an M.A. in history with a concentration in public history from Temple University and is an archives technician at the National Archives at Philadelphia.

Philip Scranton is Emeritus Board of Governors Professor, History of Industry and Technology, at Rutgers University–Camden.

Peter Seibert is the president of the Independence Seaport Museum located in Philadelphia. He has served as a CEO for museums across the United States.

Daniel Sidorick teaches labor history at Rutgers University. He is the author of Condensed Capitalism: Campbell Soup and the Pursuit of Cheap Production (2016), winner of the Richard P. McCormick Prize.

John Kenly Smith Jr. is Associate Professor Emeritus of History at Lehigh University. Initially a chemical engineer, he specialized in the history of industrial R&D.

Robert F. Smith is Provost at Valley Forge Military College and author of the book Manufacturing Independence: Industrial Innovation in the American Revolution (2016).

Alexandra L. Straub received her Ph.D. in history at Temple University, where she studied American environmental history, and works at the University of Pittsburgh as a research coordinator.

Helen Tangires, Ph.D., is the administrator of the Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., and the author of multiple works.

Theresa Altieri Taplin earned an M.A. in history from Villanova University. She is a certified archivist and museum professional in Philadelphia.

Domenic Vitiello is a professor of city planning and urban studies at the University of Pennsylvania. His essay is based on collaborative work on the Philadelphia Migration Project at University of Pennsylvania.

Matthew A. White received his Ph.D. in history from the University of Florida and is Director of Education at the Smithsonian Institution's National Postal Museum.

Luke Willert received a graduate degree in history at Harvard University. He writes about the American West and environmental history.

Christopher Willoughby, Ph.D., is the author of Masters of Health: Racial Science and Slavery in U.S. Medical Schools (2022).

Kathryn Wilson is an associate professor of history at Georgia State University. She is the author of Ethnic Renewal in Philadelphia's Chinatown: Space, Place and Struggle (2015).

Thomas Wirth serves as a lecturer in the history department at the State University of New York College at Cortland.

Megan C. McGee Yinger earned her American studies degrees from La Salle University (B.A.) and Penn State Harrisburg (M.A., Ph.D.).