Why an Annual Report?

One year ago, we distributed our first Annual Report. I'll admit it was a bit of an experiment, and it required no small amount of work. We made scores of decisions about what to include in the report, how to design it, and where to send it. But more fundamentally, we had never produced a report like this in the past. Why did we think we needed one now?

Your feedback overwhelmingly provided the response. It wasn't simply that we heard praise from readers about our accomplishments for that year (although we're always delighted to hear such praise). But the report generated a collective astonishment about the scope of activities that are under way here at the University of North Carolina Press.

This year, we once again published more than 100 books and 12 journals, but as you read through this report, you will see that we also engaged with a diverse set of communities—readers, authors, researchers, librarians, administrators, benefactors, and neighbors. It's a privilege for us to be members of these communities, and like any good neighbor, we want to play a key role in improving them. This year's Annual Report provides particular emphasis on the staff who are making that happen.

Sales and Financial Results

Since we are primarily self-funded through sales revenues, we closely monitor and review our sales performance. While Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 was one of our strongest ever, FY 2019 has been much more in line with recent trends. Our business is driven by purchases from academic libraries, individual scholars, students, and—for our trade list—general consumers. Print revenue continues to dominate, accounting for 85% of all sales, with digital making up the remaining 15%. Our new books ("frontlist") were responsible for 33%, with backlist accounting for 67%. A more complete summary of revenue sources can be found on page 5.

Books Published and Promoted in 2018

The largest section of this report catalogs the new books published last year (see pages 16–27). Our title count continues to be at record high levels, and if you measure quality by awards, then we continue to set records there as well. Pages 28–29 showcase our many winners, and 2018 marked the second year in a row that one of our titles won the prestigious Bancroft Prize.

Diversity/Equity/Inclusion

Publishing has always suffered from a lack of diversity within its professional ranks, and UNC Press is not immune to this challenge. While our author pool and the breadth of our books are a source of pride, the makeup of our staff does not reflect this diversity. Our trade association, the Association of University Presses, has launched a number of initiatives to address this industrywide problem (they can be found on their website, www.aupresses.org/resources/). At UNC Press, we are also developing efforts customized for our own local needs. In addition to our expanding financial investments in human resources and funding internal training initiatives, the staff has organized at a grassroots level to create eight working groups and launched monthly workshops focused on diversity, equity, and inclusion. This will be an effort that requires years of sustained focus, but it is fundamental to the long-term future of the Press.

Longleaf Services Continues to Expand

Our wholly owned affiliate, Longleaf Services (see page 31), is a collaborative back-end platform created to provide scaled publishing services for UNC and other university presses. In 2018 we welcomed three new fulfillment clients and continued to expand the suite of services on offer.

Office of Scholarly Publishing Services Making an Impact

Created four years ago, the Office of Scholarly Publishing Services (see page 32) supports university-based publishing throughout the seventeen-campus UNC System, as well as nonprofit organizations in the state. By continuing to expand its reach, OSPS is helping UNC Press diversify its revenue sources while increasing its impact and value throughout the state and the university system.

A Note of Thanks to Our Many Friends

Annual giving continues to be a vital factor in the Press's success, and we're very grateful for the many benefactors who made 2018 a record-setting year in development. In particular, the announcement of the $3 million Wyndham Robertson Editorial Directorship marked the most ambitious fund-raising initiative in our history. A complete list of our contributors, as well as a summary of development activity, begins on page 36.

Transitions

We were saddened this year with the passing of the indomitable Mildred Council, known to her many fans as Mama Dip. This beloved cook, entrepreneur, storyteller, and community member wrote two of our most successful trade books, and we have always been incredibly proud to be her publisher. The philanthropist Richard Jenrette also passed away this year. Dick was a supporter of the Press for decades, and we're proud that the many books published in the Richard Hampton Jenrette Series in Architecture and the Decorative Arts will be an enduring legacy to him. In more salubrious changes, we celebrated the retirement of Marjorie Fowler after a forty-two-year career at the Press. Marjorie didn't just see change happening—she frequently led the charge on adapting to the new tools of publishing. She has inspired all of us to be ready to embrace change and always evolve.

The Future

Publishing indeed continues to change rapidly, so any projections about the future should be an exercise in caution. We intend to continue growing our title counts and revenue from our book and journal programs. Fund-raising will remain an area of emphasis, including a very exciting announcement we'll be making early in 2019 that will have direct impact on the scope of our most public-facing trade books.

We also have significant ambitions to explore an innovative new approach to how we publish our most specialized monographs. Having just wrapped up a $1 million grant from the Mellon Foundation to expand the suite of services at Longleaf, we are embarking this year on our second $1 million Mellon grant to support open digital editions of new monographs. The Sustainable History Monograph Pilot has us partnering with twenty-one other university presses to implement web-based workflows to publish open digital editions of some of our leading monographs.

UNC Press is uniquely poised to lead on efforts such as this. Our reputation for excellence, paired with our financial stability, puts us in a position of privilege. And with that privilege comes the responsibility to advance the communities we inhabit. I hope that as you read through this year's Annual Report, you will see the many examples of us doing just that.

Mission, Vision, and Background

Mission

The University of North Carolina Press advances the research, teaching, and public service missions of a great public university by publishing excellent work from leading scholars, writers, and intellectuals and by presenting that work to both academic audiences and general readers.

Vision

To be recognized as the nation's premier public university press while remaining a progressive force in the state and region.

About the Press

The University of North Carolina Press, a nonprofit publisher of both scholarly and general-interest books and journals, operates simultaneously in a business environment and in the world of scholarship and ideas. The Press advances the university's triple mission of teaching, research, and public service by publishing first-rate books and journals for students, scholars, and general readers. The Press has earned a distinguished reputation by publishing excellent work from the nation's leading scholars, writers, and intellectuals and by presenting that work effectively to wide-ranging audiences.

Established in 1922, UNC Press was the first university press in the South and one of the first in the nation. Our regional publishing program—aimed at general readers and offering engaging, authoritative work on all aspects of the region's history and culture, its natural and built environment, and its music, food, literature, geography, and plant and animal life—has been widely adopted in other parts of the country. Over the years, Press books have won hundreds of prestigious awards including the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award and those of many national scholarly societies. Today, the imprint of UNC Press is recognized worldwide as a mark of publishing excellence—both for what we publish and for how we publish. Because of our respected authors who rely on the Press to connect readers with important ideas, the name of the university is carried on Press books and journals across the country and around the globe, in both print and digital formats.

Find a full history of the Press on our website at www.uncpress.org/about.

Members of our community gather for a workshop on the Press

{From Our Original Charter}

To promote generally, by publishing deserving books, the advancement of the arts and sciences, and the development of literature. . . . The stimulus to the intellectual life of the university and of the entire South is, in itself, sufficient argument for undertaking the project.

Sources of Income

The chart below is meant to capture the many sources of income here at UNC Press and how the diversity of these income streams insulates us from short term fluctuations in any one part of the operation. Within these different streams of income, there are three general categories.

The Press operates primarily as a cost-recovery enterprise with proceeds coming from a variety of different business units. These proceeds cover approximately 80% of our expenses. The bulk of that comes from the sales of books and journals (76%) with the balance coming through subsidiary rights and publishing services activities (4%).

The second category is the support we receive through the state and university system, which accounts for 7% of our income.

Finally, we have a robust development program that supports an endowment and annual giving initiatives, generating the final 13%.

UNC Press FY18 Sources of Income

Net Book Sales	$5,242,000
Subsidiary Rights Contribution	$149,000
Journals Program Contribution	$153,500
Office of Scholarly Publishing Services Contribution	$86,000
Endowment Draw	$800,000
Press Club Gifts	$98,000
State/University Support	$518,500
Total Income	$7,047,000

Board of Governors

The Board of Governors of the UNC Press is a body of nineteen members, fifteen of whom are elected by the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina and four of whom serve ex officio, charged with the responsibility of directing the affairs of the Press. This includes establishing and monitoring all policies and programs for the maintenance, operation, and improvement of the Press, including its publishing policies and projects and its budget and financial policies.

A member's responsibilities include attending board meetings; reviewing and voting on approval of monographs, series, and other publishing projects of the Press; consulting with and advising the director of the Press on matters of financial and publishing policy and strategy; and serving as needed on ad hoc or standing committees.

The Departments of the Press

With almost forty full-time employees, the staff manages all aspects of our business, including the full range of the publishing process. Their efforts can be broken into five primary departments.

The Acquisitions department oversees the development of the list of books to be published. A full description of the team that acquires our books can be found on pages 10–11.

The Manuscript Editorial department is responsible for editing and shepherding through production the manuscripts accepted for publication. The Design and Production department is responsible for the physical appearance of the book and supervises design and typesetting as well as manufacture by outside firms.

The Marketing department is responsible for advertising, direct mail, exhibits, publicity, promotion, and the sales of books and journals.

General Administration includes management, finance, operations, information technology, development, and publishing services.

UNC Press Acquisitions Team

Mark Simpson-Vos, Editorial Director

Mark joined the Press staff in 1998 and has been editorial director since 2011. He oversees the strategic direction and day-to-day work of the acquisitions editorial team. He also acquires a diverse list of general-interest and scholarly books, including work in the fields of history, American studies, Native American and Indigenous studies, gender and sexuality, southern culture, and the history of the Civil War era.

Chuck Grench, Executive Editor

Chuck joined the Press staff in 2000 after twenty-five years at Yale University Press. He acquires books in the field of history for general readers, scholars, and students. He is especially focused on African American history and culture, the history of borderlands, Cold War history, diplomatic and political history, early American studies, southern history, and the history of the American West.

Elaine Maisner, Executive Editor

Elaine joined the Press in 1994 after working previously at Yale University Press and Tokyo University Press. She acquires books for scholars and general readers in the fields of religious studies and Latin American and Caribbean studies. She also acquires general-interest books about North Carolina and the South; her specialties include cookbooks, foodways, gardening, and natural history, as well as books about pressing contemporary concerns in southern life.

Brandon Proia, Senior Editor

Brandon joined the Press in 2013 after working previously in magazine and trade publishing. He acquires scholarly and general-interest books in history, and he is particularly interested in histories of race, environment, politics, social movements, capitalism, empire, and ideas.

Lucas Church, Editor

Lucas joined the Press staff in 2013. He acquires books for the Press's regional trade list, including guidebooks, narrative nonfiction, and literary anthologies. He is broadly interested in books that bring to life the South's rich musical, artistic, architectural, and literary legacies. He also acquires scholarly and crossover books in the fields of literary studies, sociology, and social medicine.

Jessica Newman, Associate Editor

Jessica worked previously as an acquisitions editor at Carolina Academic Press before joining the UNC Press staff in 2015. Her acquisitions focus is on the interdisciplinary field of gender and sexuality studies. She also collaborates closely with Mark Simpson-Vos in his areas of acquisition.

Cate Hodorowicz, Acquisitions Manager

Cate joined the Press staff in 2017. She works with the entire acquisitions staff to facilitate the publishing process, particularly at the key stages of contracting, final manuscript preparation, and transmittal into copyediting and production. She also supports authors and the Press's editors with developmental editing.

Andrew Winters, Acquisitions Assistant

Andrew supports the acquisitions work of Lucas Church and Elaine Maisner. He joined the Press staff in 2017.

Dylan White, Acquisitions Assistant

Dylan supports the acquisitions work of Chuck Grench and Brandon Proia. He joined the Press staff in 2017.

Documentary Arts and Culture

The Center for Documentary Studies at Duke University and UNC Press work jointly to publish this series, which publishes exemplary works by documentary artists and writers and books that explore and develop the practice and method of documentary expression. The books in the series address new and emerging ways to think about learning and doing documentary work while also examining the traditions of documentary art through time.

Series Editors

Alexa Dilworth, Wesley Hogan, and Tom Rankin of the Center for Documentary Studies at Duke University

Envisioning Cuba

Envisioning Cuba publishes outstanding, innovative works in Cuban studies, drawn from diverse subjects and disciplines in the humanities and social sciences, from the colonial period through the post–Cold War era. Attention centers on the exploration of historical and cultural circumstances and conditions—for example, colonialism, slavery, racism, imperialism, and revolution—related to the development of Cuban self-definition and national identity.

Series Editor

Louis A. Pérez Jr., University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Ethnographies of Religion

This series publishes emerging work on religious life throughout the Americas, featuring the methods of religious studies along with anthropological approaches to lived religion. The religious studies perspective encompasses attention to historical contingency, theory, religious doctrine and texts, and religious practitioners' intimate, personal narratives. The series also highlights the critical realities of migration and transnationalism.

Sarah McFarland, Taylor Northwestern University

Flows, Migrations, and Exchanges

Flows, Migrations, and Exchanges publishes works of environmental history that explore the cross-border movements of organisms and materials that have shaped the modern world, as well as the varied human attempts to understand, regulate, and manage these movements.

Series Editors

Mart Stewart, Western Washington University
Harriet Ritvo, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Gender and American Culture

The Gender and American Culture series, guided by feminist perspectives, examines the social construction and influence of gender and sexuality within the full range of American cultures. Books in the series explore the intersection of gender (both female and male) with such markers of difference as race, class, and region. The series presents outstanding scholarship from all areas of American studies—including history, literature, religion, folklore, ethnography, and the visual arts—that investigates in a thoroughly contextualized and lively fashion the ways in which gender works with and against these markers.

New Directions in Southern Studies

This series is devoted to opening new lines of analysis of the American South, encouraging new interpretations of the region's past and present. The series publishes works that address the cultural dimensions of subjects such as literature, music, art, folklife, race relations, ethnicity, gender, social class, religion, and the environment.

Series Editor

Charles Reagan Wilson, University of Mississippi (emeritus)

Steven and Janice Brose Lectures in the Civil War Era

The Steven and Janice Brose Lectures in the Civil War Era are published by the University of North Carolina Press in association with the George and Ann Richards Civil War Era Center at Penn State University. The series features books based on public lectures by a distinguished scholar, delivered over a three-day period each fall, as well as edited volumes developed from public symposia. These books chart new directions for research in the field and offer scholars and general readers fresh perspectives on the Civil War era.

Series Editor

William A. Blair, Pennsylvania State University

Studies in Social Medicine

Studies in Social Medicine publishes scholarship at the intersection of medicine, health, and society that furthers our understanding of how medicine and society shape one another historically, politically, and ethically.

Series Editors

Allan M. Brandt, Harvard University
Larry R. Churchill, Vanderbilt University
Jonathan Oberlander, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Studies in the History of Greece and Rome

Books in this series examine the history and society of Greece and Rome from approximately 1,000 B.C. to A.D. 600. The series includes interdisciplinary studies, works that introduce new areas for investigation, and original syntheses and reinterpretations.

Series Editors

Richard Talbert, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
James B. Rives, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Robin Osborne, Oxford University, England

Studies in United States Culture

Studies in U.S. Culture publishes provocative books that explore United States culture in its many forms and spheres of influence. The series serves as a meeting ground where scholars from different disciplines and methodological perspectives can build common lines of inquiry, and it highlights works that link big ideas, brisk prose, bold storytelling, and sophisticated analysis.

UNC Press Journals

The Latin Americanist is the membership journal for the South-eastern Council of Latin American Studies with institutional support from UNC Charlotte and Wingate University.

Based at Berea College, Appalachian Heritage showcases the work of emerging and established writers throughout Appalachia, offering its readers literature that is thoughtful, innovative, and revelatory.

The Comparatist focuses on the comparative study of literature, cultural movements, and the arts, as well as literary and cultural theory.

With a focus on literature published through the early national period, Early American Literature is the journal of the Modern Language Association's Division on American Literature to 1800.

Published by UNC at Chapel Hill's School of Education, The High School Journal explores the broad and complex field of secondary education.

The Journal of Best Practices in Health Professions Diversity: Research, Education, and Policy is published by Winston-Salem State University's School of Health Sciences and provides a forum to examine the development and sustainability of a diverse health professions workforce.

The Journal of the Civil War Era, published in association with the George and Ann Richards Civil War Era Center at Penn State University, offers a fresh perspective on the struggles that defined this period and, by extension, the course of American history.

Produced by East Carolina University, the North Carolina Literary Review publishes poetry, fiction, and nonfiction by North Carolina writers, as well as interviews, articles, and essays about the state's authors, literary history, and writing culture.

Published by UNC at Chapel Hill's Department of American Studies, south: a scholarly journal features global and hemispheric comparative scholarship linking the American South to other Souths.

The journal of the Southeastern Division of the American Association of Geographers, Southeastern Geographer, publishes research about the South, broadly construed, as it relates to broader geographical reaches.

Housed in UNC at Chapel Hill's Center for the Study of the American South, Southern Cultures explores the history, politics, folklore, literature, and art of the South.

Published by UNC at Chapel Hill's Department of English, Studies in Philology publishes research on British literature through Romanticism and the relations between British literature and works in the classical, Romance, and Germanic languages.

Now in its 13th year of operation, Longleaf Services is a wholly owned affiliate of the University of North Carolina Press. Created by university presses for university presses, Longleaf is a nonprofit business dedicated to providing outstanding and efficient publishing solutions.

Longleaf uses economies of scale and skill to offer presses significant benefits and savings that they would not be able to realize on their own. We also provide a means of sharing and leveraging the vast experience of the individual institutions across the entire group.

LONGLEAF PROUDLY SERVES THE FOLLOWING PRESSES

The Press's Office of Scholarly Publishing Services (OSPS) opened three years ago with a goal of offering the University's North Carolina System campuses a range of sustainable, mission-driven publishing models. In 2018, OSPS and partners on six campuses published 70 new works and 160 reissues of out-of-print books. Our engagement with open-access projects grew and now includes numerous open textbooks with the potential to significantly lower student costs. As we build more connections across the system we are consistently impressed with the variety and quality of research and the publishing opportunities it offers.

NC STATE

EXTENSION

In the spring the NC State Extension published the much-anticipated North Carolina Extension Gardener Handbook. This authoritative textbook for the Master Gardener volunteer course is an essential resource for serious gardeners and is widely available to the public for the first time. Written by a team of leading horticulture experts, it contains a wealth of information about creating and managing thriving gardens, lawns, and landscapes.

UNC CHARLOTTE
College of Liberal Arts & Sciences

Center for the Study of the New South

Published in 1939 by UNC Press, Tobe is a children's book portraying the life of an African American boy on a small farm. The book was written by a white woman and illustrated by staged photos of children from a rural area near Greensboro. The Center for the Study of the New South at UNC Charlotte and the Charlotte Teachers Institute hosted a symposium to explore Tobe, and to publish a collection of essays, Why Does No One In My Books Look Like Me?: "Tobe" and Ongoing Questions about Race, Representation, and Identity.

In the 1940s, the Department of Romance Studies at UNC at Chapel Hill started the North Carolina Studies in the Romance Languages and Literatures series. In December the series published volume 315. Over the decades 270 books went out of print and most had never been available digitally. In 2018 we completed a major initiative to reissue the books in new paperback and digital formats, making the series accessible to a new generation of scholars.

The Society for Early English and Norse Electronic Texts (SEENET) is a publishing initiative directed by Timothy Stinson, associate professor of English and a University Faculty Scholar at NC State University. SEENET will publish numerous scholarly editions of Piers Plowman in a series called the Piers Plowman Electronic Archive in Print, as well as other works.

This year we helped publish issues of undergraduate journals with the following partners:

- North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, Broad Street Scientific
- North Carolina Central University, NCCU Undergraduate Research Journal
- UNC at Chapel Hill Department of History, Traces

There are numerous reasons why the University of North Carolina Press is one of the leading public university presses in the nation, including our dedicated staff, exceptional authors, and the engaged leadership of our Board of Governors and Advancement Council. It is the many friends listed here, however, who provide the margin of excellence.

I am grateful for the myriad ways in which donors have supported the Press's mission this year. The Press Club annual fund strengthened our day-to-day operations with invaluable, unrestricted operating support; the Thomas W. Ross Fund enhanced our academic engagement with the UNC campuses by providing scholarly publishing support; and the Authors Fund continued to nurture first-time authors' publications with support from established authors and their heirs. The Press's endowment reached a milestone this year, in large part because of the Press's most ambitious fund-raising initiative to date, the Wyndham Robertson Editorial Directorship.

The creation of the endowed editorial director's position was the first of several planned initiatives building toward the Press's 100th anniversary in 2022, an auspicious occasion to reflect on our past accomplishments and dream big for our future. With the leadership of the Press's Advancement Council, the support of friends recognized in these pages, and friends yet to be made, the Press's second century promises to be even more distinguished than its first. Thank you all.

NAMED ENDOWMENT FUNDS

As of January 2019

With predictable streams of income, endowments provide vital stability for multiyear publishing projects. Gifts of any amount may be made to existing named endowments, and gifts of $150,000 or more may be made to create new named endowments. The Press's endowment is professionally managed by the UNC Management Company with the spending policy set by the Press's Board of Governors.

Named endowment funds at UNC Press include both unrestricted funds, which support all facets of publishing, and restricted funds, which support particular activities or areas within our publishing list. Current named endowment funds include:

Anniversary Fund—unrestricted
Blythe Family Fund—regional, especially broad interest
Thornton H. Brooks Fund—law and American society
Marcie Cohen Ferris and William Reynolds Ferris Imprint
—public-facing books about the South
John Hope Franklin Fund—African American studies
Lilian R. Furst Fund—medical humanities
Greensboro Women's Fund—by and about women
The Luther H. Hodges Jr. and Luther H. Hodges Sr. Fund
—business, entrepreneurship, and public policy

THE AUTHORS FUND

Gifts made January 1, 2018, through December 31, 2018

Since its launch in 2013, more than 400 authors, heirs, and friends have donated over $100,000 in royalties and separate gifts to the UNC Press Authors Fund, supporting the first books of 62 young scholars. Initially applied during production to keep the price of the books as low as possible, royalties and gifts donated to the Authors Fund are also being used to strategically recruit emerging scholars' first monographs.

ZERO-OUT ROYALTIES

The Authors Fund, successful as it is, does not work well for some authors who wish to give back. The following authors and heirs have “zeroed out” their royalties with a contract amendment.
