ANNOUNCING A NEW BOOK SERIES

Abolition: Emancipation from the Carceral

This new series shares contemporary visions of abolitionism as a twenty-first century continuation of the unfinished work of emancipation from slavery. Resisting carceral—especially state apparatuses that maintain racialized inequality—this series offers a platform for the groundswell of new, interdisciplinary work extending the intellectual and political vision of abolitionism. Books will address urgent issues such as local policing, family policing, e-carceration and electronic monitoring, surveillance, crimmigration and border enforcement, antiblackness, settler colonialism, and involuntary medical confinement.

Abolition: Emancipation from the Carceral reflects the activist orientation of abolition and highlights abolitionist creative practices that explore radical worlds beyond policing and prisons. Authors may be grounded in fields such as American studies, geography, history, and critical ethnic studies. We welcome proposals for books across disciplines, from monographs to other compelling nonfiction works written for a more general readership. We will also selectively consider groundbreaking edited collections and anthologies.
